PROFILE

I've spent the last 18 years working in SEO, mainly across agencies and consultancy, with one in-house role, helping businesses turn organic search into a genuine growth channel rather than just a reporting metric.

My work sits where technical, content, and commercial priorities meet. I've led SEO programmes for eCommerce, lead generation, and multi-site brands, often coming into situations where performance has plateaued or the foundations aren't quite right, then working with teams to fix the underlying issues and build something more sustainable. A big part of that is connecting the detail to what actually matters to the business. That means working closely with developers, content teams, and stakeholders so SEO is properly integrated rather than treated as a separate channel. Spending time in-house gave me a clearer view of how that works in practice, across day-to-day trading, internal priorities, and real decision making.
